NARRATIVE STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

(The text is from the 2001 National Register Nomination with edits primarily due to physical changes observed in 2015.)

SUMMARY

The Glenwood-Brooklyn Historic Overlay District includes the Glenwood Historic District (listed in the National Register in 1985) which was expanded in 2001 to include most of the adjoining Brooklyn neighborhood. The areas were developed conjointly by the Glenwood Land Company in the early twentieth century as street car suburbs of Raleigh. The Glenwood-Brooklyn Historic Overlay District has special significance in terms of history and architecture and possesses integrity of design, setting, materials, feeling and association. In the words of the original National Register nomination, the "Glenwood suburb represents the first major documented attempt by the city's controlling interests to accommodate the rapidly growing white middle class of early 20th century Raleigh." The same statement applies to the Brooklyn neighborhood, which was integral with the Glenwood development. The district is architecturally significant for the range of early-twentieth-century house types, methods of construction, and styles. Although the Glenwood-Brooklyn neighborhood in its present form was conceived in 1905-07, no resources are known to survive from before 1907. On the basis of architectural significance the period of significance runs from 1907 to 1940 the approximate division point between the primarily historic styles that characterized development during the first half of the twentieth century and the styles that followed. Although the district has experienced some construction after 1940, these resources are not exceptionally significant and few in number.

COMMUNITY PLANNING AND DEVELOPMENT CONTEXT

The incorporation of the Glenwood Land Company in May 1905 marks the beginning of the Glenwood and Brooklyn neighborhoods. Limited residential development had occurred in the area for many years previous. According to tradition, the Brooklyn area was originally known as Will's Forest, which is said to have taken its name from a free black named Will who lived there in the late 1700s. In the mid-nineteenth century, John Devereux Jr. (1820-93), whose wife Margaret Lane Mordecai Devereux (1824-1910) inherited land contained in the historic district, built a house in the vicinity of the south end of the Glenwood neighborhood which he named Will's Forest. After the Civil War the Mordecai-Devereux lands were subdivided into several farms. One was owned by Devereux's daughter Ellen, who with husband John Hinsdale built a house known as Glenwood on the northwest corner of the present Glenwood Avenue and West Peace Street. Another daughter and her husband, Mary and Arthur Winslow, acquired the eastern portion of the present Brooklyn neighborhood. An 1876 deed referred to the general area as the "Wills Hill settlement," and there is other evidence of limited residential development in the district and vicinity during the late nineteenth century, including a subdivision of the Winslow property in 1887.

In May 1905 James H. Pou, Albert Murray and William J. Andrews incorporated the Glenwood Land Company for the purpose of developing the Glenwood-Brooklyn area into residential neighborhoods. Pou, according to architectural historian Charlotte V. Brown, author of the original Glenwood nomination, "was fitted to play a substantial role in the urbanization of Raleigh." An accomplished trial lawyer, Pou was also involved with the Raleigh Electric Company and the Carolina Power & Light Company. Pou and the others' Glenwood Land Company focused first on subdividing (or re-subdividing) land in the Brooklyn neighborhood and offering lots for sale in 1905. In June 1906 the company registered a plat of the present Glenwood neighborhood, extending from West Peace Street to Wade Avenue. About the same time a street car line was extended down Glenwood Avenue, which became the development's grand concourse. New streets were laid out and given the names of United States presidents (including one contender, the 1876 popular vote winner Samuel J. Tilden).

Charlotte V. Brown, author of the Glenwood National Register nomination, writes: "Glenwood was the product of the growing town [of Raleigh], its diversifying economy, the rise of the middle class, rural in-migration, urban out-migration and changing patterns of landholding and tenancy. Glenwood [was] also the product of the energy and ideals of men whose importance, prestige, power and wealth (or access to wealth) affected the urbanization of the city and the south." James Pou and his associates appear to have marketed their development to a specific sector of the population. Blacks were excluded by deed covenants, and poor whites were effectively excluded by the costs of purchasing a lot and building a residence (the latter could cost no less than $1,500, it was reported at the time). According to Brown, the resulting population of the Glenwood neighborhood was "blue collar and lower middle class with a smattering of the professionals from the middle and upper middle classes." City directories describe a similar population mix in the Brooklyn area, and the architecture of both areas reflects this diversity.

The Glenwood-Brooklyn area was the first of several suburban developments that launched Raleigh's western and northern expansion during the early twentieth century. Its development came at a time when Raleigh's city limits were enlarged--the first expansion in a half century--and the city's population increased by about forty percent during the first decade of the century. The Glenwood-Brooklyn area was shortly followed by the Cameron Park and Boylan Heights suburbs and by a subsequent James Pou development named Bloomsbury, begun in 1911 and accompanied by an amusement park of the same name. Charlotte V. Brown, in her article "Three Raleigh Suburbs: Glenwood, Boylan Heights, Cameron Park" (1985) cited three reasons for the development of her three topic neighborhoods. The first was a need for housing in the growing city, and, secondly, housing specifically for workers in expanding areas of government, education, and the service sector of the economy. The third factor had to do with what Brown referred to as "a heightened sense of class based on the new social and economic institutions which had begun in the years after Reconstruction." Brown pointed out that the city's population "was becoming more segregated not only along racial lines, but also along class lines." Glenwood and its sister developments met these new needs.

The enthusiasm generated by the Glenwood-Brooklyn development was expressed by Raleigh businessman Fred Olds, writing in the 1907 annual report of the Chamber of Commerce: "The northern suburb, Glenwood, has been developed remarkably. During the year 100 lots have been sold out of a total of 500, of which less than half so far have been put on the market. Contracts have been made for 26 residences ... and these are built or underway." In June 1908 the Glenwood Land Company attempted to close out its development by holding a lot auction.

According to the local press the auction met with considerable success; over a hundred lots priced between $175 and $600 were sold.

The Methodist church played an important part in the life of the district. In 1876 John Devereux gave land for a church and schoolhouse in the Brooklyn vicinity, and by 1881 Brooklyn Church had been constructed. The church was instrumental in the location of the Methodist Orphanage on a fifty-acre parcel adjoining the district, which was purchased in 1908 from the Glenwood Land Company. The orphans attended church and patronized stores in the Brooklyn neighborhood, and they donated memorial stained-glass windows to Jenkins Memorial United Methodist Church, the successor to Brooklyn Church.

Another important institution in the Brooklyn area was the Richard H. Lewis School. At the beginning of the twentieth century, the Brooklyn School, as it was then known, moved from West Peace Street to North Boylan Avenue and ultimately to its present location at 601 Devereux Street where it took the name of school board member Dr. Richard H. Lewis. In the 1926-27 school year 730 students were enrolled, instructed by twenty teachers.

Raleigh city directories provide information on the demographics of the district during its early decades. As Charlotte Brown observed in the original nomination, residents were drawn primarily from the middle class. Government employees, small business owners, and salesmen and saleswomen were common occupations. At least forty-eight houses were occupied by railroad employees at some point during the period 1909 to 1940. Norfolk Southern and the Seaboard Air Line were the principal railroad employers. Representative railroad occupations included conductor, car inspector, flagman, yard master, engineer, brakeman, claim adjustor, dispatcher, freight agent, car repairman, boilermaker, clerk, telegraph operator, and roundhouse foreman.

A number of engineers, machinists, and boilermakers who were not listed as railroad employees may in fact have also worked for the railroads. Mixed in with their middle- and working-class neighbors were a few individuals whose occupations--and houses--suggest higher income. Two of the largest and most sophisticated early houses in the district, 1218 and 1220 Glenwood Avenue, were occupied (respectively) by a dentist and an attorney in 1915.

In line with national trends, home construction in the district subsided during the materials shortages of the World War I period but rebounded with the economic boom of the early to mid-1920s. A slackening of demand that preceded the stock market crash of 1929 and the severe depression that followed curtailed construction, although limited home building recommenced during the somewhat improved economic picture of the late 1930s. World War II brought another hiatus but also an increase in demand. Home construction in the district was limited by at least two factors after World War II. Most lots had been developed, precluding later development except as infill. Also, population growth shifted to newer suburbs located on the urban periphery.

Charlotte Brown reports that the Glenwood neighborhood was considered to have remained "fairly stable until about 1950," followed by a gradual decline. Brown cites increased automobile traffic along the arterial routes that border the district, increased rental use of dwellings and absentee landlordism, and the death of original inhabitants as negative factors affecting the neighborhood, and a similar decline occurred in the Brooklyn area.

Linda Harris Edmisten, (formerly of the Raleigh Historic Properties Commission, now Raleigh Historic Development Commission) described the challenges and opportunities experienced by the neighborhood in her essay "Planning and Conservation in Raleigh's Glenwood Neighborhood" (1985). Edmisten credited city planning director A. C. Hall Jr. for his efforts to preserve the neighborhood's residential character in the face of commercial development pressure, and she identified a potential unintended negative consequence of the neighborhood's listing in the National Register of Historic Places, which at the time made tax credits available only for the rehabilitation of income-producing properties and which, Edmisten feared, might have encouraged the conversion of dwellings into offices or other non-residential uses.

Glenwood-Brooklyn's downward slide reversed during the last quarter of the twentieth century. Edmisten noted a contributing factor; in the early 1980s a portion of the Methodist Home property located across Glenwood Avenue from the original district was developed as the Bishop's Park condominium complex, demonstrating that the area could be successfully marketed to Raleigh's burgeoning class of young urban professionals. The growth of the preservation ethos during the same period and renewed interest in the architectural styles of the early twentieth century fostered appreciation for the neighborhood, and the area's proximity to the downtown also contributed to its rebirth. Today the health of the Glenwood-Brooklyn area is demonstrated by its robust community life, high property values, and busy remodeling and rehabilitation activity.

ARCHITECTURAL ANALYSIS

The Glenwood-Brooklyn Historic Overlay District includes a broad range of house types and styles from the first half of the twentieth century. The district's architectural character reflects a variety of factors, among them stylistic and cultural influences, economic trends, and the income level of residents. When development commenced in 1907, vernacular and Victorian influences were still strong in the region's domestic architecture. The district's earliest houses, those built from 1907 to the mid-1910s, usually have simple symmetrical massing with rear kitchen and dining room ells, and one-room-deep center-passage and two-room plans appear to predominate. One- and two-story versions of these houses are found; examples include the one-story William S. Ford House at 719 Gaston Street and the group of matching two-story houses on the 600 block of Devereux Street (620, 622 and 624). These house forms represent the continuation of nineteenth century regional vernacular tradition. Similar houses were built in rural areas and small towns throughout North Carolina and adjoining states. And, as was typical for middle-class dwellings of the type, weather boarded frame construction was typical.

The houses noted above also illustrate the persistence of Victorian stylistic influence. In the district this influence is typically expressed by the presence of features such as decorative (nonfunctional) gables, turned and sawn millwork ornament in porches and gables, and (less frequently) decorative sheathings such as novelty or German siding and shaped wood shingles. Represented in the district is a roof type known to students of North Carolina architecture as the triple-A roof, which features a decorative gable on the center of the forward-facing slope of the main gable roof (making three gables, hence triple "A"). The roof type is ultimately derived from mid-nineteenth-century Gothic Revival domestic architecture, and it appears in the aforementioned houses on the 600 block of Devereux Street. Common milled ornament in the district includes turned porch posts, sawn and spindlework porch post brackets, and louvered gable vents, the latter typically diamond-shaped in form but occasionally also quatrefoil (four lobed) and triangular. Mass-produced milled ornament became readily available in the late nineteenth century with the establishment of mechanized sash and blind factories.

Relatively speaking, most of the district's Victorian houses are fairly reserved in character. Elaborately ornamented houses such as appear in Raleigh's Oakwood neighborhood are not found in the Glenwood-Brooklyn Historic Overlay District. This architectural reserve probably reflects the middle-class means of the typical neighborhood resident. There are exceptions, however. Several lot owners, especially on Glenwood Avenue, built fairly substantial houses in a Victorian genre known as the Queen Anne style. Primary elements of the style found in the district include irregular massing and roof lines, turrets, and wraparound verandas. Secondary details include decorative window sash and classical allusions. Examples of Queen Anne houses include the John W. Keyes House at 800 Glenwood Avenue, which features an octagonal corner tower with a pyramidal roof; the J. Martin Fleming House at 1218 Glenwood Avenue, with its spreading gable roof, elliptical and bay windows, and a wraparound veranda supported by classical columns; and the ca. 1915 James A. Bridgers House at 800 North Boylan Avenue, which has a prominent gabled dormer with a Palladian window, a false keystone, and turned pilasters. Architectural historian and former neighborhood resident David Black notes that the district's Queen Anne houses typically exhibit Colonial Revival influence.

At the other end of the Victorian-vernacular spectrum was a working-class house type known as the shotgun, characterized by its narrow linear form, front-gable orientation, and typically one-story height. A dwelling with shotgun characteristics is the story-and-a-half William Fain House at 709 Gaston Street, built about 1909 and occupied at the time by one of the district's few African Americans.

Victorian influence appears in a few houses built as late as the early 1920s (the ca. 1922 W. Rufus Blackley House at 1300 Filmore Street is an example), but generally speaking the style was eclipsed by the Craftsman style beginning in the mid-1910s. The characteristic Craftsman house type, nationwide as well as in the district, was the bungalow, a snugly proportioned house of one or one and a half stories. Almost all Craftsman bungalows have front porches, and most of these are engaged (incorporated) under the house roof. Other common Craftsman bungalow features include large dormers that expanded upstairs living space, porch supports with wood posts (usually tapered and sometimes clustered) on brick pedestals, wood-shingle sheathing in gables and on dormers, gable brackets (usually triangular in form, sometimes appearing like purlin ends), and double-hung windows with upper sash composed of three or more vertical panes. Unlike the vernacular Victorian houses that preceded them, the district's Craftsman bungalows were not strongly influenced by regional architectural traditions. Because the type was disseminated nationwide through plan books, magazine articles, and even as kits distributed by Sears Roebuck, Aladin Homes and other mail-order firms, the same bungalow could appear anywhere. Also unlike earlier houses in the district, Craftsman bungalows usually dispensed with rear wings by incorporating the kitchen and dining room into the house envelope. Most of the district's Craftsman bungalows were built during the late 1910s and early to mid-1920s, although some were built during the late 1930s after the worst effects of the Depression subsided.

Roughly one hundred Craftsman bungalows stand in the district, most clustered along the back streets of the Glenwood area. Two basic gable roof forms are represented: side-gable and front-gable. Side-gable roofs are typical of the earlier and more finely appointed bungalows whereas front-gable roofs appear on later and more modest examples. Although they were relatively modest in scale and proportion, several bungalows exhibit a high level of quality in their construction. One is the ca. 1917 Askew-Daugherty House at 1000 Glenwood Avenue, which is distinguished by wood-shingle siding, stone porch pillars, and window surrounds that show the influence of Japanese design. Representative of the more modest later bungalows is the ca. 1938 Euclid H. McWhorter House at 507 Tilden Street, a front-gabled one-story dwelling similar in form and scale to the shotgun houses of earlier decades.

Not all Craftsman houses were bungalows; a few two-story Craftsman houses such as the ca. 1923 Arthur B. Morgan House at 509 Cleveland Street and the ca. 1922 Louise E. Gerow House at 1120 Filmore Street were constructed. Nor were all Craftsman houses purely Craftsman in style—some were blended with another popular style of the period, the Colonial Revival. Most of the district's hybrid Craftsman/Colonial Revival houses stand on prestigious lots along Glenwood Avenue. The ca. 1923 house at 1200 Glenwood Avenue, which has a colonial brick first story capped by a shed-dormered Craftsman second story, and the conservatively detailed two-story brick Thomas E. Dowdy House at 1416 Glenwood Avenue (ca. 1924) are examples.

Next to the Craftsman style the Colonial Revival was the most popular idiom during the period between the world wars. Approximately twenty houses and one apartment house, most dating to the 1920s, show the predominant influence of the style, which is usually expressed by brick construction with contrasting white trim, symmetrical compositions, and classically-derived detail.

Two particularly well-developed examples stand on Glenwood Avenue. The story-and-a-half Roy T. Parker House, built about 1927 at 810 Glenwood Avenue, has a symmetrical three bay facade with a gabled entry stoop echoed by gabled dormers on the roof. Somewhat more grandiose is the ca. 1925 house of lawyer Alfred J. Fletcher at 909 Glenwood Avenue, which features a Doric entry porch overlooking Fletcher Park, a Palladian gable window, and louvered wood shutters with decorative piercings in upper panels. The district's Colonial Revival houses often have Craftsman interior features such as Craftsman mantels.

A sub-set of Colonial Revival houses have gambrel roofs which evoke, directly or indirectly, the Dutch architecture of the Mid-Atlantic region. The ca. 1926 James R. Kee House at 611 Wills Forest Street is a handsome gambreled Colonial Revival residence with a first-story facing of richly colored sandstone and flanking sunrooms with paneled walls. The Colonial Revival style was resurrected in the 1970s and 1980s by developer Seth Gaskill, who employed it in the remodeling of eight Victorian and Craftsman houses in the Brooklyn neighborhood."

Other period styles make cameo appearances in the district. The ca. 1923 home of lawyer James S. Fulghum at 615 Wills Forest Street represents the Tudor Revival style. Its defining features include false half-timbering in the clipped gable of a front wing, and pairs of plain wood porch posts yoked together at their tops by small arches. Simplified Tudor influence reemerged in the late 1930s with the construction of small picturesque houses known to students of North Carolina architecture as Period Cottages, illustrated by examples at 1213 Filmore Street and 519 Washington Street. The two-story stuccoed house at 1414 Glenwood Avenue, built about 1925, shows the influence of the Arts and Crafts movement.

Of interest in the context of the architectural development of the neighborhood were building contractors and carpenters who resided in the district. At least four building contractors are listed in city directories: Eugene W. Lloyd at 509 Cole Street; Julius H. Kenyon at 1201 Filmore Street; Addison M. Thompson at 706 Glenwood Avenue, and; Percy D. McLean at 510 Jefferson Street. There appears to be a connection between some of the more expressive Victorian cottages and original occupation by carpenters; for example, carpenter George H. Ruth lived at 808 Brooklyn Street, notable for its clever use of decoratively sawn weatherboards to mimic fish-scale wood shingles, and carpenter William S. Ford lived at 719 Gaston Street with its fanciful quatrefoil gable vents. In other respects both the Ruth and Ford houses are fairly conventional dwellings with triple-A gable roofs. The ca. 1915 house at 504 Adams Street, home of granite cutter Howard W. Brown, has granite porch pillars carved by Brown. No architects are known to have lived in the district before 1940.

No houses are known to be built in the district between the close of the period of significance (1940) and the end of World War II. Those built in the latter half of the 1940s tended to perpetuate pre-war styles. In the 1950s taste shifted to the Ranch house type, of which a few examples were built in the district. (The Glenwood and Brooklyn neighborhoods had essentially filled up by the late 1920s, precluding substantial later construction.) The early 1940s therefore marks a divide in the district's architectural development. The late twentieth century has seen a growing interest in the rehabilitation of historic houses, and the most recent infill construction generally respects the architectural traditions of the district. Much of the new construction has sympathetic setbacks and some are in a Neo Victorian style.

NARRATIVE DESCRIPTION

SUMMARY

The Glenwood-Brooklyn Historic Overlay District encompasses approximately eighty acres in central Raleigh, North Carolina. The district has the form of a reverse letter L, with its stem—which corresponds to the original Glenwood National Register district—roughly bounded by the Norfolk Southern rail line on the east, the western edge of Glenwood Avenue on the west, Wade Avenue on the north, and West Peace Street on the south. Extending westward from the south end of the stem is the Brooklyn neighborhood, roughly bounded by West Peace Street on the south, Saint Mary's Street on the west, the Methodist Orphanage and Fletcher Park on the north, and Glenwood Avenue on the east.

The district is watered by small tributaries of Pigeon House Branch, which is a tributary of the Neuse River, and most of the district area lies at elevations of between 300 and 350 feet above sea level. Street, block, and lot layouts are based on orthogonal city planning but are more irregular, with numerous streets intersecting at non-orthogonal angles. The principal circulatory path is Glenwood Avenue (also an important city thoroughfare), which has a modern landscaped median that follows the course of a street car line discontinued in 1933. Topographically, the Brooklyn neighborhood is somewhat more level and higher in elevation than the Glenwood area.

Of the 270 resources in the Glenwood-Brooklyn Historic Overlay District (excluding secondary structures and vacant lots), 237 (88%) are classified as contributing resources; that is, they were built during the period of significance (1907-1940) and they retain architectural integrity. The majority of contributing resources are residential in character, and of these, single-family dwellings predominate. Other building types represented include apartment buildings, small-scale commercial buildings, a government laboratory, a church, a school, and a firehouse.

Contributing dwellings are one story, story-and-a-half, or two stories in height. They are typically of frame construction and most retain historic weatherboard and/or wood-shingle siding. Some houses are of brick construction or have brick veneers. Roofs are typically gabled—either side-gable, gable-fronted, or triple-A—although hip roofs are also common. Brick is the most common material for foundations, chimneys, and flues.

Many houses were originally built with porches, which survive in most cases albeit sometimes in modified form. Porch posts and columns are usually of wood or combinations of wood and brick (as with many Craftsman bungalows). Beginning after World War II, deteriorated porch posts and columns were sometimes replaced with decorative metal supports in imitation of nineteenth-century cast ironwork. Windows come in a wide variety of double-hung sash arrangements; casement windows are rare. Doors sometimes have sidelights and/or transoms. Rear ells appear on some houses, primarily those dating to before 1920.

The district preserves numerous landscape features from the period of significance. Graveled service alleys provide rear access to lots on many blocks. Concrete sidewalks are standard along most streets and are often bordered on the property side by low stone or brick retaining walls. Mature hardwood shade trees abound, and modern shrubbery, flower beds, and yard areas perpetuate historic landscaping practice. Intrusive modern features such as front-yard parking lots and wood privacy fences are rare.

INTEGRITY STATEMENT

The Glenwood-Brooklyn Historic Overlay District possesses good integrity overall and on a resource-by resource basis. The district's original street layout and the pattern of development that arose during the period of significance remain essentially unaltered. Some demolition has occurred. The block bounded by Glenwood Avenue, Devereux Street, North Boylan Avenue, and Hinsdale Street, contains the historic Richard Lewis School which was rendered noncontributing by a modern front addition; two historic houses were demolished in the 1980s or 1990s to permit a parking lot expansion behind the school. Demolition and new construction on Glenwood is clustered in the 800 and 1300 blocks. Given Glenwood Avenue's nature as an arterial road, this demolition and new construction is more noticeable than the scattered new construction and extensive rehabilitations scattered elsewhere in the district such as the 1200 block of Pierce Street and the 1300 block of Dale Street

Adjoining areas and resources retain their basic historic character: railroad tracks to the east, the landscaped grounds of the Methodist Orphanage (now Fletcher Park) to the northwest, Broughton High School to the west. West Peace Street's commercial buildings are somewhat screened from the district

As the counts in the description summary indicate, there is a high percentage of resources that retain integrity of feeling, association, workmanship, materials, setting, design, and location. The character-defining architectural features of the district's historic dwellings (the dominant resource type) are retained in most instances. Non-historic (post-1940) residential development is limited and in most cases respects historic patterns of scale and placement.

Two classes of modern alteration of historic dwellings should be noted. One is the late-twentieth century Colonial Revival remodeling of a number of houses in the Brooklyn neighborhood, which typically resulted in the loss of porches and some original detail, but which rarely affected the overall form, scale, and finish of the dwellings (hence, in general, their classification as contributing resources). More recently, the owners of one-story dwellings have expanded their living area by finishing attic spaces or by adding second stories. In some instances this has not altered the basic form or scale of the dwellings as viewed from the street, and the contributing status is retained. Where the scale and form of the house is dramatically altered by this kind of expansion, noncontributing status has been assigned.

Most new construction falls into two categories: an attempt at a replication/interpretation of historic styles, and modern styles that are sympathetic through size, scale, massing and setback. Examples of the former include 802 and 804 Glenwood which are neo Victorian. Examples of the latter are 1304 and 1306 Glenwood and 508 Jefferson which do not mimic historical styles but are sympathetic to surrounding construction in size, massing, scale, and setback and include interpretations of bays and porches, features found within the district.

INVENTORY

(The text is from the 2001 National Register Nomination with edits primarily due to physical changes observed in 2015.)

The inventory descriptions are based on the 2001 text with 2015 updates as observed. Most building dates are derived from city directories (the year a given address first appears in the directory) and from other sources used during the preparation of the Glenwood-Brooklyn National Register nomination. Because first-appearance address dates may differ by a year or two from the date of construction, most dates are assumed to be approximate and are therefore preceded by "ca.", for "circa". When architectural evidence suggests a resource is considerably younger or older than a first-appearance address date, an approximate date is assigned on the basis of the architecture. Multiple dates give the date of original construction followed by dates of major alterations or additions. Historic house names are usually derived from the original occupant, as determined by city directories. Occasionally, when two original occupants are listed, a hyphenated name is assigned, and a similar naming approach is taken when an original occupant and long-term later occupant are known.

The district is proposed to be a Historic Overlay District-Streetside (HOD-S). Design review in HOD-S is only in those areas visible from the street as defined in city code. Because of this, rear features (such as decks and porches) and structures in rear yards were not inventoried. Unless noted otherwise, rear features and accessory buildings noted in 2001 were not documented as part of the 2015 survey update. They are assumed to be intact, but the written descriptions are not included in this report.

Status – Street Address – Name – Date

N. 500 Adams Street. House. ca. 1953.

One-story frame Minimal Traditional house with novelty weatherboard siding and an asphalt shingled gable roof. The front porch has square wood posts. Other features include a cinder block foundation, an interior brick flue, a side entry stoop on brackets, 6/6 windows, and a front picture window.

C. 502 Adams Street. James F. Busbee House. ca. 1922.

One-story frame Craftsman bungalow with weatherboard siding and an asphalt-shingled hip roof. A gabled extension engages the front porch, which has tapered wood posts on massive tapered brick pedestals. Other features include a brick foundation and interior chimney, gable brackets, exposed rafter ends, and 6/6 windows. Between 2001 and 2015 a large two-story camel back addition was constructed. The setback and style are sympathetic and the house remains contributing. Busbee was a railroad car inspector.

C. 504 Adams Street. Howard W. Brown House. ca. 1915.

Two-story frame house with synthetic siding and an asphalt-shingled gable roof with diamond shaped gable vents. The Craftsman one-story front porch has tapered granite pillars on brick pedestals. Other features include a brick foundation and interior chimney with arched cap, and

1/1 windows. Between 2001 and 2015 a one-story rear ell was replaced with a two-story side gabled mass that echoes the original. The addition is unobtrusive and the house continues to contribute to the district. Brown, who was a granite cutter at the Cooper Monument Co., carved the porch pillars.

C. 505 Adams Street. Jesse H. Wyatt House. ca. 1918.

Two-story frame house with novelty weatherboard siding and an asphalt-shingled hip roof with a gabled ventilation dormer. Other features include a replacement cinder block foundation and new 1/1 windows. 505 Adams is similar in form to 507 and 509 Adams. Between 2001 and 2015 metal porch supports have been replaced with tapered wooden posts on masonry clad piers and a matchstick rail has been added to the one-story porch. One of the two transomed entries to two apartments has been framed in and converted to a window. Wyatt, the occupant in 1918, was a salesman with Thomas H. Briggs & Sons (see 507 Adams). For much of the 1920s and 1930s the house was occupied by watchman Joseph C. Walker.

C. 507 Adams Street. Milton B. Holmes House. ca. 1918.

Two-story frame house with novelty weatherboard siding and an asphalt-shingled gable-front roof. The one-story front porch has paneled square wood columns. Other features include a replacement cinder block foundation, an interior brick chimney, an entry with transom, and 6/1 windows. 507 Adams is similar in form to 505 and 509 Adams. Holmes, the occupant in 1918, was an electrician. For much of the 1920s and 1930s the house was occupied by Jesse H. Wyatt, a salesman with Thomas H. Briggs & Sons (see 505 Adams).

C. 509 Adams Street. John L. Gray House. ca. 1918.

Two-story frame house with novelty weatherboard siding and an asphalt-shingled hip roof with a decorative front gable with a square louvered wood vent. The one-story front porch has classical wood columns. Other features include a replacement cinder block foundation, an interior side parged chimney, an entry with transom, and 6/1 windows. 509 Adams is similar in form to 505 and 507 Adams. Gray, the occupant in 1918, was a railroad flagman. For much of the 1920s and 1930s the house was occupied by policeman Luther C. Thompson.

C. 511 Adams Street. James White House. ca. 1922.

One-story frame Craftsman bungalow with weatherboard siding and a wood-shingled hip roof. A gabled extension engages the front porch, which has tapered and paneled wood posts on brick pedestals and a peaked span. Other features include a brick foundation and exterior side chimney and interior flue, gable brackets, and 6/1 windows. White was a claims adjuster with Norfolk Southern Railroad.

C. 601 Adams Street. Nichols-Copley House. ca. 1918.

Story-and-a-half frame Craftsman bungalow with novelty weatherboard siding and an asphalt shingled gable roof with shed dormers on the front and back, the front one with a small balcony. The engaged front porch has wood supports. Other features include a brick foundation and exterior side chimney, diamond-shaped louvered gable vents, and 3/1 windows. Railroad flagman Ira S. Nichols and railroad yard conductor Atlas Copley were both listed as occupants of this house in 1918.

C. 603 Adams Street. William X. Coley House. ca. 1922.

Story-and-a-half frame Craftsman bungalow with weatherboard siding on the first story, wood shingle siding on the upper story, and an asphalt-shingled gable roof with a shed dormer. The engaged front porch has tapered wood posts. Other features include an exterior gable-end brick chimney with a battered stack, gable brackets, and 1/1 windows with decorative upper sash. A side bay window noted in 2001 could not be seen due to foliage. Coley, a circulation manager with the News & Observer Publishing Co., was listed as the occupant of this house from 1923 through 1939.

N. 604 Adams Street. Alice R. Allen House. ca. 1947, ca. 2005

Since 2001 the house has been converted to a two-story house with a one-story hipped roof section with a hipped gable on the facade, and a gable-roofed, two-story rear section. The three bay front porch remains but the house does not resemble the resource that contributed to the district in 2001 thus is deemed non-contributing.

C. 605 Adams Street. Derril J. Forrest House. ca. 1922.

Two-story frame house with weatherboard siding and an asphalt-shingled hip roof. The one-story front porch has wood posts and a modern balcony serving a modern second-story entry. Other features include a brick foundation, interior chimney, ventilation cupola, and modern 1/1 windows. Forrest was a salesman. For much of the 1920s and 1930s the house was occupied by policeman Murphy H. Harris.

C. 607 Adams Street. Building. ca. 1924.

One-story frame building with vinyl siding and an asphalt-shingled front-gable roof. Other features include a gabled entry stoop on brackets, a foundation of brick piers with cinder block infill, a back deck, 6/1 windows, and a front picture window. City directories suggest this small building may have been built about 1924 as the Puryear Grocery & Transfer, C. C. Puryear proprietor. If so, it appears to have been remodeled as a dwelling in later years.

C. 702-04 N. Boylan Avenue. House. ca. 1937.

One-story frame Craftsman duplex with vinyl siding and an asphalt-shingled hip roof with a hip dormer. Other features include a front porch on wood posts with replacement railing, a brick foundation and interior flues, enclosed rafter ends, and 6/1 windows. 706-08 N. Boylan, located next door, was originally similar to this house in form and detail.

C. 706-08 N. Boylan Avenue. House. ca. 1937; ca. 1980.

One-story frame duplex with vinyl siding and an asphalt-shingled hip roof remodeled in the Colonial Revival style about 1980. Other features include a brick foundation and interior flue, a stoop with wooden railing, wood-barred foundation vents, double rear screened porches, historic 6/1 windows, and modern 9/9 windows. The house was originally similar in form and detail to 702-04 N. Boylan, located next door.

C. 717 N. Boylan Avenue. Alexander D. Bradley House. ca. 1924; ca. 1980.

Story-and-a-half frame remodeled Craftsman bungalow, with fiber cement siding and an asphalt-shingled gable roof with a large front shed dormer. The engaged front porch has square wood posts, wooden railing, and split entry stairs constructed in ca. 2007. Other features include a brick foundation and exterior gable-end chimney, wood-barred foundation vents, a gable-end bay window, and new 6/1 windows. A rear ell was added ca. 2007. Bradley, listed as the occupant in 1924, was a sheet metal worker. Police detective Herbert L. Peebles occupied the house in the 1930s.

C. 719 N. Boylan Avenue. Jewell and Nellie Burch House. ca. 1924; ca. 1980.

One-story frame Craftsman bungalow remodeled in the Colonial Revival style about 1980, with weatherboard siding and an asphalt-shingled hip roof. The engaged front porch has stout wood posts with sawn brackets and a Chinese Chippendale railing. Other features include a brick foundation and exterior side and interior chimneys, wood-barred foundation vents, and 6/1 windows. Jewell R. Burch, a widow, and Miss Nellie E. Burch, a nurse, were listed as occupants in 1924.

C. 725 N. Boylan Avenue. Jenkins Memorial United Methodist Church. 1916; ca. 1950.

Brick church with Gothic Revival and Romanesque Revival stylistic influence, corner entry towers, a nave form, and a brick-faced cinder block side addition of ca. 1950 for classrooms and offices. The exterior is distinguished by mostly round-arched stained-glass windows and louvered belfry openings with double, triple, and quadruple courses in the arches. Concrete is used for buttress weatherings, window sills, and copings. The taller north corner tower has a circular window and belfry. Other exterior features include a slate-shingled gable roof with parapet ends, corbelled cornices, a marble inscription plaque, and a side handicap ramp.

The Brooklyn neighborhood Methodist congregation grew out of an 1875 prayer meeting held at the future site of the neighborhood. Land for the church and a school was given in 1876 and by 1881 a church building had been erected. The present building is named for a later pastor, the Rev. John Wesley Jenkins, who worked to establish the Methodist Orphanage north of the Brooklyn neighborhood. A frame church with Victorian ornament and corner towers was built in 1906-07 at the present site; it burned in 1914 and was replaced by the present brick building in 1916. The children and workers at the orphanage attended Jenkins Memorial, which now serves its original Methodist congregation and an Episcopalian congregation.

C. 800 N. Boylan Avenue. James A. Bridgers House. ca. 1915.

One-story frame Queen Anne house with weatherboard siding and an asphalt-shingled hip roof with a gabled dormer featuring a Palladian window with turned pilasters and false keystone in the surround. The front porch has classical wood columns. Other features include a foundation of brick piers with cinder block infill, interior brick chimneys, a modern replacement metal roof ventilator closely modeled on the original, an entry with transom, and 1/1 windows. Bridgers was a plasterer. Norfolk Southern train dispatcher Asa H. Seawell occupied the house in the 1920s.

C. 802 N. Boylan Avenue. James A. Whitaker House. ca. 1909.

One-story frame Victorian house with weatherboard siding and an asphalt-shingled triple-A roof with a peaked window in the front gable. The front porch has colonnettes on brick pedestals and a sawn balustrade salvaged from another house. Other features include a foundation of brick piers with cinder block infill, and cornice returns. Whitaker was an "inspector". Henry Glenn occupied the house in the 1930s.

N. 804 N. Boylan Avenue. John T. Renn House. ca. 1909, ca. 2005.

Since 2001 this house has been massively re-built. It is now a story-and-a-half with the gable roof having been raised. A small central gable remains but contains a window and is flanked by shed-roofed wall dormers. Porch posts are square posts with pilasters and no rail and the central entrance is flanked by sets of four light French doors. The house no longer retains enough of its historic appearance to contribute to the district. Renn was a machinist.

C. 806 N. Boylan Avenue. Jefferson D. Wiggins House. ca. 1911; ca. 1980.

One-story frame Victorian house with weatherboard and fiber cement siding and an asphalt-shingled front/side gable roof. The house was remodeled in the Colonial Revival style about 1980. A brick stoop with a Chinese Chippendale railing replaced the original front porch but has been subsequently replaced with a shed roofed porch with square posts and pilasters. Other features include a brick foundation and interior chimneys, louvered wood foundation vents, rectangular gable vents, cornice returns, and modern 4/4 windows. Wiggins was a machinist.

C. 914 N. Boylan Avenue. Thaddeus H. Pleasants House. ca. 1909.

One-story frame Victorian house with asbestos-shingle siding and an asphalt-shingled triple-A roof with a diamond-shaped louvered wood vent in the front gable. The porch has wood posts. Other features include a foundation of brick piers with brick infill, and 1/1 windows. Pleasants was a watchman. In the 1920s the house was occupied by Charles Maddox, Corresponding Secretary with the Baptist State Convention Board of Missions.

C. 918 N. Boylan Avenue. Angeline Williamson House. ca. 1911.

Two-story frame Victorian house with vinyl siding and an asphalt-shingled triple-A roof with octagonal louvered wood vents in the gables. The one-story front porch has turned posts. Other features include a foundation of brick piers with cinder block infill, a one-story rear wing, an entry with transom, and new 6/6 windows.

C. 922 N. Boylan Avenue. Robert A. Williams House. ca. 1911.

One-story frame Victorian house with weatherboard siding and a standing seam metal gable roof. The front porch has modern classical wood columns. Other features include a brick foundation and 6/6 windows. Williams, a foreman, occupied the house through 1940.

C. 926 N. Boylan Avenue. Alonzo C. Bashford House. ca. 1909.

Two-story frame Victorian house with weatherboard siding on the first story, wood shingle siding on the second story, and an asphalt-shingled gable roof. The one-story front porch mixes old and modern turned posts and has a recently installed balustrade that incorporates an arched motif. Other features include a brick foundation and exterior gable-end chimney, a one-story rear wing, an entry with transom and 4/4 windows (the front ones with paneled shutters). Bashford was a carpenter with Bashford Plumbing & Heating.

C. 930 N. Boylan Avenue. William J. Andrews House. ca. 1909; ca. 1980.

Two-story frame Victorian house with aluminum siding and an asphalt-shingled gable roof with louvered diamond-shaped vents in the gables. The house was remodeled in the Colonial Revival style about 1980 including tapered wood porch posts. Other features include a brick foundation with barred wooden vents, a modillion-like cornice, and modern 6/1 windows. A one-story rear wing noted in 2001 has since been expanded to two stories. Andrews was a harness maker at the time he first appears as an occupant in 1911. In later years he was employed as a railroad engineer.

C. 932 N. Boylan Avenue. J. Cleveland Edwards House. ca. 1917.

One-story frame Craftsman bungalow with weatherboard siding and an asphalt-shingled gable roof with a shed dormer. The engaged front porch has stout modern wood supports and a decorative railing. Other features include a brick foundation and interior chimneys, diamond shaped louvered wood vents and wood-shingle sheathing in the gables, and 6/1 windows. Edwards was a railroad conductor. Printer Charles C. Vestal was the occupant during the 1920s and 1930s.

C. 934 N. Boylan Avenue. Eupha O. Brogden House. ca. 1924.

One-story frame Craftsman bungalow with weatherboard siding and a shingle-pattern pressed metal front-gable roof. The front porch has tapered wood posts on brick pedestals. From 1939 to the 1990s this was the home of John H. Crabtree.

BOUNDARY JUSTIFICATION

The boundaries of the Glenwood-Brooklyn Historic Overlay District district encompass those areas of the historic Glenwood and Brooklyn neighborhoods that retain sufficient integrity for designation. The district includes entirety of the area in the Glenwood-Brooklyn National Register Historic District.

Since the National Register designation in 2001 there have been some changes through demolition, remodeling to the point of loss of integrity, and new construction.

Buildings demolished:

- 607 Adams
- 1313 Dale
- 714 Glenwood
- 805 Glenwood
- 807 Glenwood
- 1306 Glenwood

Buildings highly altered:

- 604 Adams
- 804 N Boylan
- 505 Cole
- 508 Cole
- 1301 Dale St
- 708 Hinsdale
- 711 Hinsdale

Buildings that have either been demolished or are drastically altered:

- 518 N Cleveland
- 1222 Filmore (originally non-contributing)
- 1308 Filmore
- 1223 Pierce
- 1225 Pierce

New Construction:

- 1311 Dale
- 1313 Dale
- 511 Devereaux
- 513 Devereux
- 805 Glenwood
- 807 Glenwood
- 809 Glenwood
- 813 Glenwood
- 1304 Glenwood
- 1306 Glenwood

- 508 Jefferson

There is insufficient concentration of change at the boundaries to prompt modifying the boundaries. The demolition and new construction along Dale and Pierce could presumably be excluded as they are at the boundaries but given the existing and intuitive boundaries of the road and railroad, exclusion could be problematic especially in administration.

Demolition and new construction along the Glenwood corridor is sympathetic to the existing district in terms of scale and to some extent style. While an argument could be made to extract some parcels east of Glenwood north of Fred Fletcher Park, again exclusion could be problematic especially in administration. Additionally, the new construction is somewhat scattered along the corridor which diminishes its negative impacts on integrity.

Otherwise, conditions are as they were in 2001 and the boundary justifications for the National Register district apply to the proposed local district.
