Project Overview

In November of 2016, Wake County voters approved a plan for focused investment in public transit which includes building approximately 20 miles of transit lanes along four (4) Bus Rapid Transit (BRT) corridors. The first BRT corridor, New Bern Avenue, will connect downtown Raleigh with Wake Med and New Hope Rd. Construction is anticipated to begin in the Summer of 2022.

As part of the project, the City of Raleigh is hiring artists to create artwork integrated in the stations. The artwork will aesthetically enhance the stations while also highlighting community stories and history.

This Artist Call is specifically for the New Bern Bus Rapid Transit Corridor. Selection for this project does not necessarily mean you will be selected for other BRT corridors. Artists' designs may be used in City of Raleigh publications, displayed on electronic screens at stations, and on the City of Raleigh website and social media channels.

Glass Artwork Process

Artists selected as part of this call are responsible for designing the two-dimensional (2-D) artwork for the glass but will not physically make or install it.

- BRT station windscreens will be created and installed by a pre-selected skilled glass fabricator. The City of Raleigh will find and hire this fabricator. Selected artists are not expected to subcontract with the fabricator.
- Artists will be responsible for creating and handing off a print ready digital file of their artwork to the glass fabricator.
- Selected artists will work with the glass fabricator/printer to make sure their artwork meets expected file requirements and is produced within the color/resolution/etc constraints of the printing process.
- Artists will be required to participate in community engagement to develop their designs.

Public Art Goals and Opportunities

- Create unique and aesthetically pleasing glass windscreens that speak to community character, stories, and/or histories
- Collaborate with the project team (artists, architects, and engineers) to design a cohesive aesthetic experience at each bus station

Community Engagement

A major component of this design process is conducting community engagement sessions to gather feedback from the communities near each station, with the goal of including the shared history and experiences of the community in the station artworks. This project requires strong interpersonal skills and the ability to listen deeply and thoughtfully to community input. Public engagement and community outreach will be supported by City staff and integrated into the Wake BRT outreach process.

Artist-in-Residence Dare Coulter has already created a roadmap of themes and possible histories at each station, but selected artists will be expected to conduct research and community sessions in order to fully flesh out themes at their 2 selected stations. Themes which have already been identified for possible inclusion in the various artworks may include history, wayfinding, nature, playful fun, and community inspiration.

The City is also working to hire a local historian who can provide a historical narrative for each station as well as a roadmap for the overall corridor. That information will be made available to artists as they begin the design process.

Artist and Design Team Collaboration

Selected artists will collaborate closely with a team of artists and designers.

Members of the team include:

- 9 glass artists - each designing glass windscreens at 2 stations
- 1 Artist responsible for designing and creating the wayfinding and concrete integrated artwork at up to 19 of the stations

- 1 Artist responsible for designing and creating metal railing artwork at 11 of the stations
- The BRT station architecture and engineering team
- Installers and contractors working on the project

The design of the Glass artists work will take the lead on defining the narrative and aesthetic of each station. Using the glass art as inspiration, the Concrete artist and Railing artist will create work that speaks to the unique themes and history of that station.

To create a cohesive look at each station, the glass, railing and wayfinding/integration artists will be expected to coordinate on design inspiration and overall station aesthetics. Each station will have a unique character while enhancing and establishing the design identity of the corridor.

Artists will also work closely with the Architects and Engineers on the project to make sure designs follow transportation, transit, ADA, and other guidelines. Furthermore, artists will work with the station design team to ensure cohesion between the different types of art integration.

About Bus Rapid Transit

Bus Rapid Transit (BRT) is a flexible high-capacity transit solution that combines physical and operational elements to increase service speed and reliability. BRT creates dedicated bus lanes on local roads so bus operators can bypass traffic and keep their routes on schedule. BRT stations will feature raised platforms, making it easier for passengers to board the bus. Fares are collected on the platform so passengers can board without delay.
