Administrator's Letter

Greetings and fall tidings from the Historic Resources and Museum (HRM) Program. There are exciting changes afoot as we move into a new season. The weather begins changing and colors quickly follow suit with leaves showing one last burst of personality prior to dormancy until next spring. We also have several exciting developments in the HRM Program with arguably the most exciting being the long-awaited reopening of Moore Square. This milestone was marked with a series of events and programs celebrating the occasion. Of course, there are many more events and activities planned. You can see the full program schedule at: raleighnc.gov/ parks/content/ParksRec/Articles/Parks/MooreSquare.

The HRM Program also added new staff members at Pullen Park. Allora Spruill joined us as the new Program Manager and Sabrina Dooley as the new Administrative Specialist. Allora began working with us in August and looks forward to learning about programs at Pullen as well as the HRM Program. Allora is in her second stint with us as she previously worked at Pullen in a part-time capacity. Sabrina is also a familiar face in a new role as she was promoted from the Customer Service Specialist position into this new full-time role. Both women are looking forward their new roles and especially excited to participate in 2019 Holiday Express!

Please check out all the upcoming events at programs throughout the HRM Program at the back of this newsletter. In the next few months you can take in the new A Delicious Country exhibit at the COR Museum and retrace the steps of early 18th century explorer John Lawson through the eyes of Scott Hueler, a modern-day explorer in his own right. You could visit Pullen Park and listen to the stirring sounds of John Philip Sousa on the carousel. You could even attend a fall festival at Mordecai Historic Park to hear live music or maybe even encounter a ghost! These experiences and more await you. So please take the time to learn about the upcoming events and programs within the HRM Program.

We are truly excited about these new challenges and changes and we remain committed to fulfilling our mission to the public. As always please stay tuned and stay involved!

Chair's Letter

m W}$ elcome back to school!

The National Park Service recently celebrated its 103rd birthday on August 25. Though they are perhaps best known for their stewardship of natural landscapes, the agency is in many ways the first official keeper of our American history. Verne E. Chatelain, the Service's first Chief Historian observed:

"There is no more effective way of teaching history to the average American than to take him to the site on which some great historic event has occurred, and there to give him an understanding and feeling of that event through the medium of contact with the site itself, and the story that goes along with it."

In Raleigh, the Historic Resources and Museum Program (HRMP) parallels the National Park Service's commitment and approach to historic stewardship and engagement. Each year, thousands of elementary and middle school students experience history first hand at HRM Program sites including Mordecai Historic Park and the Pope House. The recently-opened visitor center at Moore Square and planned interpretive improvements to the Latta House and University Site will offer expanded opportunities for historic engagement and active learning.

We look forward to seeing you,

Fred Belledin Chair, HRM Advisory Board

Ask A Historian

by Douglas Porter, Program Director, Historic Sites

Is it true that a school was once located in Moore Square? What can you tell me about it?

Yes, it is! A modest schoolhouse stood in Moore Square for approximately two decades in the nineteenth century. The specifics are hard to come by, but sources suggest that the school was constructed in the early 1840s and operated until the start of the Civil War in 1861. The school was initially called Eastern Ward School, but became the NC Classical, English, and Moore Square from "Map of the City of Raleigh," 1847, State Archives of North Carolina.

"Baptist Grove (Common) School, By A. B. Stronach" News & Observer, Sunday, Feb. 23, 1908. Mathematical School in 1844. Though it may have been more commonly known as the Baptist Grove Free School or the Baptist Grove School House, as noted years later by former student, A. B. Stronach.

Stronach's recollection, published in the News & Observer in 1908, is the most vivid description of the school I've encountered in the historical record. Stronach recalled that the school was "a weather boarded, frame structure . . . 25 or 30 by 50 or 60 feet, running lengthwise north and south, [and] sat exactly in the center of the square." Inside the building, the students, which were all male, sat at "long wood benches, without any backs." Likewise, Stronach remembered that the "teacher's desk [was] a flat top table . . . on a form (platform) two steps rise in the middle of the east wall. From this vantage ground he overlooked the school and from time to time cast his ruler to some offender." Stronach's memoir indicates that several instructors taught at the school during his years as a student. He mentioned several, in particular, including a "Scotchman . . . who was a good teacher, but a man of violent temper," as well as a "Mr. Henry Utley . . . [who] was a good teacher, not overly strict, [and] popular with the boys." However, Stronach thought that "Mr. Womble . . . a strict but good teacher . . . ruled the Baptist Grove better than any teacher in my day."

Stronach, who was born in 1847, was among the last group of students to attend the school. By 1908 the Baptist Grove School House was only a memory. As Stronach poetically wrote: "Like the snows of yesterday, the Baptist Grove school house, the trees and the boys who attended the school have disappeared, except a few of us who like lingering patches of snow await the sun of summer to cause them to disappear."

Fran Hunter – 10 Year Anniversary

by Josh Ingersoll, Historic Sites Director

With the theme of this Raleigh Register being education, I wanted to pay tribute to Fran Hunter who recently hit her 10-year anniversary as a Museum Educator at Mordecai Historic Park. In May of 2009, Fran took a job that would result in her making an impact on dozens of staff and volunteers, thousands of school children, and countless visitors to the Mordecai Historic Park.

I first met Fran in 2010 when I accepted a job at Mordecai as a Museum Educator. As my first job in the history field, I came in as a nervous college kid who had no idea what I was doing. While Fran had been there for less than a year at that point, I followed her tours, listened to her education programs, and ate as much of her apple pie as she would bring. Little did I know that I would spend the next decade working with her. Fran is the kind of person in a workplace that people gravitate towards because you know that she cares, and even though she has seen many staff walk through the door, she still has a smile and a willingness to show the next nervous new professional the ropes.

Today, Fran is an integral part of our education team at Mordecai. She works deeply with the Jr. Interpreter program, leads the summer camp team, mans the loudspeaker at the Egg Hunt, coordinates with volunteers, and if you enjoy the table decorations at the Volunteer Banquet, that's her special touch too. More than anything, I can definitively say that Fran has a made a difference at Mordecai over the last ten years both in my life and the lives of the countless children who have filed through Mordecai hearing her education program, taken her tours, or been a part of a fun-filled event. Mordecai would not be the place it is today without Fran, so the next time you see her, wish her a congratulations and a big hearty thank you for all her hard work.

Fran Hunter.

When I hired Fran as a Museum Educator in May of 2009 what stood out, other than her matriculating at Auburn, was her energy and enthusiasm. She quickly became our go-to programmer and someone we could count on to model exceptional customer service for staff and the public.

Troy Burton

Fran has been (and continues to be!) a particularly invaluable member of Team Mordecai! Her love for Mordecai Historic Park is evident, and has been demonstrated in a variety of ways, but perhaps especially through her dedication to the school field trip and Junior Interpreter programs, as well as the volunteer program. Fran was a veteran by the time I joined the HRM Program in 2014, and it became clear to me in short-order that she was a leader among her peers and someonel could rely on. Working with Fran and getting to know her over the past several years, has been a pleasure. Doug Porter
